Tomlin discontinued his outdoor marketing efforts, which included billboards, posters, and other outdoor advertising, and instead focused on digital marketing. He also launched a new line of clothing, which was well-received by the public. However, his decision to discontinue outdoor marketing was controversial, as some believed it was a sign of his declining popularity. Tomlin's decision was also criticized for being a publicity stunt, as he was seen as trying to make a statement about the importance of digital marketing. Despite the controversy, Tomlin's decision was ultimately successful, as his clothing line and digital marketing efforts both gained significant traction.
